

Local Chemical Company Seeks Highest Standard in Quality

❌ PROBLEM

An industrial chemical company with operations in multiple states needs to be able to control access from one central location in an effort to achieve a lofty goal of ISO 9001 registration—a family of standards related to the highest quality of management—at all 28 facilities.

ROOT CAUSE

Nationwide industrial chemical company with headquarters in Kansas City wants to achieve the highest standard in security and operational performance with the help of Kenton Brothers and S2 IP-based access control.

✅ KENTON SOLUTION

Install an S2 IP-based access control system thereby giving the company the ability to manage operations, people, and security all from the company's Kansas City headquarters.

Harcros Chemicals Inc is a major distributor and producer of industrial chemicals with 28 branches in 20 states throughout the US. They are committed to safety, quality, and responsible operations. The organics plant, housed locally here in Kansas City, maintains an ISO 9001 registration along with 9 other branches throughout the United States. The ISO registration deals with the fundamentals of quality management systems, including 8 management principles on which the standards are based. The company plans on all facilities achieving this status in the future.

To help Harcros attain this goal in regards to security and operating performance, Kenton Brothers installed a fully integrated IP-based S2 access control system at the company's headquarters in Kansas City and currently at 8 of the 28 branches with plans to add to the system. This system will allow for control of all the Harcros facilities from one location, give them the ability to control access, and to make minor or major adjustments immediately. The system will also have nearly endless expansion opportunities as the company expands to include all 28 branches.

By installing the S2 system, Kenton Brothers is helping Harcros to meet and exceed it's goal for the highest standards in management and to meet the ISO 9001 registration at all Harcros branches.
